Before celluloid : The stroboscopic animation principle was introduced in 1833 with the phénakistiscope and also applied in the zoetrope since 1866, the flip book since 1868, and the praxinoscope since 1877, before it became the basic principle for cinematography. Experiments with early phenakistiscope-based animation projectors were made at least as early as 1843. Jules Duboscq marketed phénakistiscope projection systems in France between 1853 and the 1890s.

Any film may also have a sequel, which portrays events following those in the film. Bride of Frankenstein is an early example. When there are more films than one with the same characters, story arcs, or subject themes, these movies become a series, such as the James Bond series. And, existing outside a specific story timeline usually, does not exclude a film from being part of a series. A film that portrays events occurring earlier in a timeline with those in another film, but is released after that film, is sometimes called a prequel, an example being Butch and Sundance: The Early Days.
